Local News Briefs

Tax Free Day

The NC Dept. of Revenue's 2011 tax free weekend runs August 5th through 7th. You can purchase school supplies tax free including clothing, shoes, classroom supplies, winter clothing, uniforms, rubber pants and even diapers! You can also purchase sporting goods and computers. Check out the NC Dept. of Revenue's website at www.nc.gov for information about price limits before heading out to buy what you need for school.

Keep Clear of Snakes

Spending more time outside playing, gardening, or hiking? You likely keep your eyes open for snakes along the way. Whether in your front yard or the middle of a wooded area, snakes can make an appearance in NC.

The good news is that most NC snakes are nonvenomous — they do not inject toxic venom when they bite. Other than the dangerous copperheads, cottonmouths, and rattlesnakes, there are dozens of species within the state which are beneficial. These nonvenomous snakes help by eating mice, rats, and insects — feeding themselves and as a side benefit helping families and farms get rid of these pests.

If you believe a snake is venomous, use caution and move away from it. If you were to try to kill it, your approach may put you in more danger of being bitten. It is best to get away. Whether you believe a snake is dangerous or not, move away and let it go... You might not see it in action but likely what it is eating is a worse “pest” than the snake is.

The Good News... Are You Ready for Football?

The NFL lockout is over! The teams are back in training camp, and it looks like the regular season games will go on as scheduled. Likely tens of thousands of local American Football fans are glad to know the season will not be further delayed.

The 32-teams of the National Football League are preparing for the season and will be on the road soon, starting with preseason games schedule in August. Week 1 of the regular season is scheduled for September 8th.

The Bad News... High Temps

With temperatures above 90 degrees — reaching over 100 degrees — caution is needed. Be sure to stay hydrated and watch out for yourself, your loved ones, and your pets. Dizziness, muscle cramping, nausea, and weakness are just a few of the symptoms of heat stroke. Someone who begins feeling disoriented, has a high temperature, or stops sweating may need to get out of the sun and cool themselves, drink water, or spray water on their skin. When in doubt, you may wish to seek medical attention or talk with your doctor about what to watch for and what treatment to use.

For your pets, talk with your vet about how to recognize heat-related distress. Heat can be deadly to animals, quickly, and they cannot tell you how they feel. More information is available online at www.spcawake.org.

Things We Did in NC When We Were Bored

This new section provides reviews of NC events, attractions, and businesses by The Grey Area staffers.

Denton Street Pool 1434 Denton Street, Rocky Mount)

Several times this (hot) summer, we visited the Denton Street Pool. We, our children, and our visiting grandchildren, all enjoyed spending the afternoon swimming, sliding, and playing.

We dropped our towels in the covered area of the patio and proceeded to the zero entry part of the pool. An easy walk into the shallows, and the kids were playing with the dumping buckets and umbrella-shaped water shower.

After passing a quick swim test, the older children took to the diving board and racing slides. Even we grown-ups enjoyed being able to move from the slides to the play area and back again.

We had a great time and were sorry when closing time came. When you need a cool down, we would recommend checking out the Denton Street Pool. Sometimes crowded, sometimes fairly empty, it made for a great afternoon break.

The Zebulon Cougar

In the July 1st issue of The Grey Area, we reported cougar sightings within Eastern North Carolina over the past decade. This issue, we bring you a cougar of another type — and right in Zebulon.

Driving along West Gannon Avenue, visitors and residents alike cannot help but see the stories-tall cougar located at the front of Auctions America. It's one of those landmarks everyone sees, and few know much about.

The Zebulon Cougar is one of only two cats built in 1972 by the same company that built figures for Walt Disney. While one cat headed north to Washington DC, the other came to North Carolina. Measuring close to 15 feet tall, the Cougar sports teeth about a foot long and wild eyes.

Originally, it was taken to 1313 Downtown Boulevard to live at the Leith Lincoln-Mercury car dealership. Lincoln-Mercury referred to the Lincoln and Mercury divisions of the Ford Motor Company. At the beginning of June 2010, Ford announced they were discontinuing the Mercury brand.

The oversized Cougar and his twin were designed to draw attention to the Mercury Cougar automobiles during the early seventies. Various Cougar versions were manufactured from 1967 to 2002.

The Cougar model was a big part of Mercury's image for years, and marketing identified Mercury dealers like Leith as being "at the sign of the cat". In Leith's case, the sign of the cat was two stories tall!

Mike Leith of Zebulon is owner of the Cougar and the original Leith Lincoln-Mercury. He's tended the beast for decades, and it watches over his Auctions America, which runs the Raleigh Classic Car Auction each year at the North Carolina State Fairgrounds.

The big cat stayed at the Downtown Boulevard dealership for years, glaring down from the roof at passers-by. When the car dealership moved from the property, the cougar was relocated to Zebulon and began spending its days watching traffic go by on Gannon Avenue.

Now approaching its 40th birthday, Mr. Leith plans to relocate the Cougar once more. The classic cat will now prowl at Howden Classic Cars, a dealership opening at 709 W Gannon Avenue this month. Cougars don't normally live together in a pride; however, several classic Mercury Cougars will join the Zebulon Cougar when he is released into his new habitat.

Releasing the cat into its new home is serious business. He'll be transported to Howden and released August 4th. Visit The Grey Area on Facebook to see more about the Cougar and view photos of its old and new habitats.

Quote of the Issue

Albert Einstein

"We cannot solve our problems with the same thinking we used when we created them."

Chuckle of the Issue

A young executive was leaving the office late one evening when he found the CEO standing in front of a shredder with a piece of paper in his hand.

"Listen," said the CEO, "this is a very sensitive and important document here, and my secretary has gone for the night. Can you make this thing work?"

"Certainly," said the young executive. He turned the machine on, inserted the paper, and pressed the start button.

"Excellent, excellent!" said the CEO as his paper disappeared inside the machine. "I just need one copy."

Shades of Grey

What Do You Think?

Some situations are viewed in black and white; right and wrong. Yet, many people think situations also have a grey area where solutions are not so easily discerned. This is not just about the choices people make, but the thought process they go through to arrive at their decisions.

Submitted for Your Consideration and Conversation

Your best pal, whom you've known for 20 years, comes out with you and your group of friends each Friday night. All of you meet up in groups of two or three, each with a designated driver.

Your friend, you've noticed, always comes in his own car straight from work. He always drives home alone and you sometimes think he seems a little inebriated.

Over the years, you've spoken with him several times about it. You have tried on many occasions to get him to designate a driver, give up his keys, or take a cab home. He always declines and you don't push the issue despite your concerns.

Legal or not, you feel a sense of responsibility for his behavior and for "allowing" him to drive by not forcibly stopping him.

During one of your Friday nights, you all go out to a ball game. Everyone is having a great time, and those not designated as drivers are having several beers. The game runs long, and by the end your friend seems to be unsteady on his feet. And there is a complication: on this particular night, some family members have come along and your friend has his young son with him.

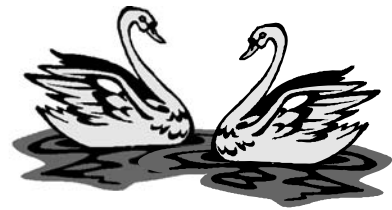

What do you think of the situation? Is this a time you would put your foot down and insist one of the drivers take him and his son home? Do you think he would be more likely to listen to reason for his child's sake, even though he has ignored you in the past? Would you refuse to let him put his son into his vehicle if he ignored your logic?

Do you call the police and restrain him in the parking lot until he can be given a sobriety test? Do you relent, and just let him drive home with his boy?

How would you feel about your friend if the situation was handled calmly and everyone was driven home safely? Would you feel differently about him — despite the long years between you — if he was belligerent and drove home?
