Rocky Mount New Gunfire Tracking

The City of Rocky Mount announced that the Rocky Mount Police Department has implemented a new system to identify gunshot location.

The recently implemented ShotSpotter Gunfire Alert & Analysis Solution provides immediate gunshot location data. This enables accurate data to aid emergency response decisions, improve situational intelligence, and increase safety for first responders.

"We're honored to be providing a solution to help reduce gun violence and crime in Rocky Mount," said Ralph A. Clark, president and CEO of ShotSpotter. "The City is actively taking the right measures to fight gun crime. I'm excited about our partnership to help improve the City's policing efforts by providing the invaluable information needed to combat and reduce gun violence."

According to the ShotSpotter website, the ShotSpotter Gunshot Location System (GLS)® provides "real-time information about gunfire and explosions, giving [police] a more complete picture of an area's crime characteristics. Analytics and reports identify hot spots, locations of interest, and crime patterns, providing the capability to track, analyze, monitor and respond to gun-crime trends."

The Rocky Mount Police Department joins police from California, New York, Connecticut, Massachusetts, and many other states in use of this specialized technology.

This new resource is just one more tool being used to fight crime in Rocky Mount. By helping police better identify the source of gunfire, the responders hope to gain more information and forensic evidence for investigations.

The Good News... Museum Hands-on

The North Carolina Museum of the Coastal Plain offers a variety of exhibits and workshops teaching the history of North Carolina.

Originally built on a site purchased from the Wilson Sanatorium Company, the museum structure housed the US Post Office and court house until 1981. Open since 2010, the North Carolina Museum of the Coastal Plain's exhibits showcase the lives of early settlers and Native American history.

Housed in the same building as the Imagination Station Science Museum of Wilson, the third-floor museum is offering hands-on workshops in October to teach historic gardening, blacksmithing, and spinning and weaving. More information and exhibit descriptions are online at www.ncmcp.org.

The Bad News... Angel Food Ministries Gone

Angel Food Ministries, a non-profit that provided low-cost food boxes, announced its doors are closing. Until last month, many NC churches helped residents by selling the Angel Food boxes containing both fresh and frozen foods.

A statement release on www.angelfoodministries.com stated, "...we regret to inform you that we have not found a solution that will allow Angel Food Ministries to continue to distribute food on a monthly basis and have decided to cease operations. We realize the pressure that this places on our host sites, community food banks and customers."

This comes as a blow to local churches and food distribution centers, as well as the families that depended on the affordable food boxes to feed their struggling families.

A Little Local History

Native Americans in North Carolina

Native Americans resided across the North Carolina area long before the settlers came. Starting with the first European arrivals in the 16th century, the tumultuous history of NC contains a mix of interactions that led to high cultural and linguistic losses by Native Americans within the region.

Centuries of immigration brought an end to some of the bands or tribes within the state. Before European settlements, these included the Catawba, Cheraw, Cherokee, Chicora, Creek, Croatan, Tuscarora, Tutelo and Saponi, and Waccamaw. Today's state-recognized tribes include the Cherokee, Coharie, Haliwa-Saponi, Lumbee, Meherrin, the Occaneechi Band of the Saponi Nation, Sappony, and the Waccamaw-Siouan — though only the Eastern Band of Cherokee Indians are recognized by the United States Bureau of Indian Affairs.

While much of their culture was lost through the years, organizations and Native American communities across North Carolina work to save and share their traditions and languages for future generations.

One of the many to learn more about the Native American traditions and history of NC is through local powwows, fairs, or harvest festivals held by Native American communities. Several are happening in October, including the Running Water Singers Powwow in Fayetteville, the First American Festival in Dunn, and the Meherrin Powwow in Ahoskie.

Pow Wows are gatherings of Native people, where both Native American and non-Native American people meet to dance, sing, learn, and honor American Indian culture.

November is Native American Heritage Month, making October a great time to learn about and to educate on North Carolina's long and continuing native history.

Shades of Grey

What Do You Think?

Some situations are viewed in black and white; right and wrong. Yet, many people think situations also have a grey area where solutions are not so easily discerned. This is not just about the choices people make, but the thought process they go through to arrive at their decisions.

Submitted for Your Consideration and Conversation

Your daughter goes on a sleep over. She stays overnight Friday evening at the home of a classmate. The two girls go to elementary school together and are 9 years old.

When your daughter comes home on Saturday, she tells you how much fun she had, and seems to be in a great mood.

That night, however, she has trouble going to sleep. It is several hours before you see that she has nodded off. You're awakened later by her screams and go in to check on her.

She is sweaty, and tells you that she had a nightmare. She says she dreamed a man in a mask was chasing her with a knife and that it scared her. Then she tells you that the nightmare character looked like the one in the movie she watched at her classmate's house — a movie you know to be rated R, violent, and bloody.

You don't allow your daughter to watch R-rated movies, and disapprove of the two young girls being allowed to watch this particular one. By the time your daughter goes back to sleep — on the couch, with you nearby — you are fuming mad.

You're angry at the mother of your daughter's friend for letting such young girls watch this nightmarish movie. You know you hadn't specifically prohibited the movie, and aren't sure if you actually told the mom your child couldn't watch R-rated movies, but you still feel angry.

Do you think that the mom was in the wrong because of the age of the children? Do you think it is all right for you to judge the other mom based on the rules you set for your child? Or because the R rating is for movies possibly not suitable for under-17 children? Do you think it would be easier to let it go than confront the other mom? If you let it go, would you mention something the next time your daughter visited? Or do you think you would keep your daughter home from future sleep overs at her house?

Alternatively, what if you had told the other mom not to let your daughter watch scary or R-rated movies? Do you think you would be more likely to say something to her?

Things We Did in NC When We Were Bored

Darkside Haunted Estates

Our staffers checked out Darkside Haunted Estates in Middlesex NC. Creeeeepy! Consisting of a 1/4-mile forest walk through graveyard and ghouls, the path takes visitors through multiple haunted houses and structures. Passing through Darkside Manor, the insane asylum, the chop house, and the chilling clown house, the level of unease and goose bumps were both rising. They found that thrills, chills, and kills abounded on this freaky estate!

This haunted attraction rates nice-and-creepy and great for a family night out or a special date night! Young children and the feint of heart might want to stay home, though firemen and EMTs are kept close at hand.

There are also refreshments, games, and a 1/4-mile haunted hayride to delight all ages, even if you choose not to venture off into the forest.

Jolley Family Fun Farm

The Jolley Family Fun Farm has opened a huge corn maze! Located just a few minutes from downtown Zebulon, the maze covers eight acres, all cut out in the shape of a gigantic pirate ship.

This new maze opened with a Zebulon Chamber Of Commerce Ribbon Cutting on Friday, September 23rd. The Grey Area staffers had the opportunity to enter the maze several days before, and had a great time walking through and checking out the twists, turns, and games along the way. Visitors could easily spend over an hour playing all the games and testing their navigation skills!

In addition to the large maze, there was also a mini maze designed for small children. Our staffers would have enjoyed checking out the shark in the corn, and hope to return with kids in tow to see more. Grown ups, teens, and families should have an a-maze-ing time at Jolley Family Fun Farm!

Quote of the Issue
Mahatma Gandhi
"The things that will destroy us are: politics without principle; pleasure without conscience; wealth without work; knowledge without character; business without morality; science without humanity; and worship without sacrifice."

Chuckle of the Issue
There was a haunted house on the outskirts of the town which was avoided by the town folk — the ghost which resided there was feared by all.

However, an enterprising journalist decided to get the scoop of the day by photographing the fearsome phantom. When he entered the house, armed with only his camera, the ghost descended upon him, clanking chains and screeching. Frightened, he told the ghost, "I mean no harm — I just want your photograph."

The ghost was quite happy at this chance to make headlines, and posed for a number of ghostly shots.

The happy journalist rushed back to his dark room, and began developing the photos. Unfortunately, they turned out to be black and underexposed.

So what's the moral of the story?
The spirit was willing but the flash was weak.
